COMPANY ENTRY

Company Name: Afikim Public Transportation Ltd.
Industry/Sector: Transportation
Headquarters Country: Israel
Support Type: OPERATIONS, OTHER
Severity: CRITICAL

--- CLAIM ---

Title: Bus Services to Settlements with Segregation

Description: Afikim is an Israeli bus company operating public transportation lines serving Israeli settlements in the occupied West Bank. It runs routes that connect settlements and has been accused of enforcing a segregation policy on these buses ¹. By providing dedicated transit for settlers and excluding Palestinians, Afikim directly supports and normalizes the settlement enterprise.

- Publisher: Business & Human Rights Resource Centre
- Date: 2 Feb 2015

--- NOTES ---

Afikim has faced lawsuits and international criticism for its role in perpetuating segregation and servicing illegal settlements. The company did not provide a response to these allegations when invited by human rights groups ².

Company Name: AHAVA Dead Sea Laboratories
Industry/Sector: Cosmetics
Headquarters Country: Israel
Support Type: OPERATIONS, PRODUCTS
Severity: CRITICAL

--- CLAIM ---

Title: Settlement-Based Cosmetics Manufacturer

Description: AHAVA is an Israeli cosmetics company that manufactures skincare products using minerals extracted from the Dead Sea. Its main production site, visitor center, and flagship store are located in Mitzpe Shalem, an illegal Israeli settlement in the occupied West Bank. By excavating natural resources and operating facilities on occupied land, AHAVA directly profits from and contributes to the settlement enterprise.

- Date: Unknown (Accessed 2025)
- Quote: "Manufactures cosmetic products using minerals from the Dead Sea. The company's production site, visitor center and main store are located in the Mitzpe Shalem settlement in the occupied Jordan Valley."

--- NOTES ---

AHAVA's products have been the target of international boycott campaigns for years. The company's operations on occupied land violate international law, and several retailers in Europe have dropped AHAVA products due to these concerns.

Company Name: Airbnb, Inc.
Industry/Sector: Online Platforms (Hospitality)
Headquarters Country: United States
Support Type: OPERATIONS
Severity: HIGH

--- CLAIM ---

Title: Listings in Illegal Settlements

Description: Airbnb operates a global home rental platform and has offered listings of properties located in Israeli settlements in the occupied Palestinian territories and Syrian Golan Heights. Despite briefly announcing a ban on settlement listings in 2018, the company continues to allow rentals in settlements, effectively normalizing and profiting from occupation by treating these illegal locations as tourist accommodation.

--- EVIDENCE ---

Source 1:

- URL: <https://boycott-israel.org/boycott.html#online-services-and-platforms>
- Title: Airbnb (Boycott List entry)
- Publisher: Boycott-Israel.org

- Title: Airbnb (Boycott List entry)
- Publisher: Boycott-Israel.org
- Date: 2025 (accessed)
- Quote: "Airbnb offers listings in over 220 countries... Airbnb offers listings of accommodation in illegal settlements...."

--- NOTES ---

Airbnb faced pressure and lawsuits over its settlement listings. In 2018 it announced a policy to remove West Bank settlement listings but later reversed that decision after legal challenges. The company's practices remain under scrutiny by human rights organizations.

Company Name: Apple Inc.
Industry/Sector: Technology
Headquarters Country: United States
Support Type: OPERATIONS
Severity: LOW

--- CLAIM ---

Title: R&D Presence and Matching Donations

Description: Apple has acquired several Israeli tech companies and maintains research and development centers in Israel, focusing on semiconductor and hardware technologies. While Apple's involvement is not directly tied to the occupation, it has been reported (though unconfirmed) that Apple's employee donation matching program has matched donations to Israeli military and settlement initiatives. Its significant operations in Israel contribute economically to the state, indirectly supporting its policies.

--- EVIDENCE ---

Source 1:

- URL: <https://boycott-israel.org/boycott.html#technology-and-computers>
- Title: Apple (Boycott List entry)
- Publisher: Boycott-Israel.org
- Date: 2025 (accessed)
- Quote: "Apple... conducts limited R&D activities in Israel focusing on semiconductor technologies. Apple matches worker donations to IDF and illegal settlements, employees allege, although not confirmed."

Source 2:

- URL: <https://www.timesofisrael.com/apple-opens-new-rd-center-in-israel-as-it-taps-into-local-talent/>
- Title: Apple opens new R&D center in Israel as it taps into local talent
- Publisher: Times of Israel
- Date: 27 Feb 2015
- (This source provides context on Apple's R&D centers in Israel.)

--- NOTES ---

Apple's severity is considered low because its support for the occupation is indirect. The company's primary impact is through its investment and presence in Israel's tech economy. There is no evidence of Apple directly engaging with settlement activities beyond unverified employee donation matches.

Company Name: Ashtrom Group Ltd.
Industry/Sector: Construction and Materials
Headquarters Country: Israel
Support Type: OPERATIONS, PRODUCTS
Severity: CRITICAL

--- CLAIM ---

Title: Settlement Construction and Resource Extraction

Description: Ashtrom is one of Israel's largest construction and infrastructure conglomerates. Through its subsidiaries, Ashtrom operates a stone quarry in the occupied West Bank and a cement production plant in occupied East Jerusalem ³. The company has also built housing projects in numerous settlements (e.g., Oranit, Ma'ale Adumim, Beitar Illit) ⁴. By exploiting Palestinian natural resources and constructing settlement infrastructure, Ashtrom directly bolsters the growth and maintenance of illegal settlements.

--- EVIDENCE ---

Source 1:

- URL: <https://www.whoprofits.org/company/ashtrom-group/>
- Title: Ashtrom Group – Company Profile
- Publisher: Who Profits Research Center
- Date: Unknown (Accessed 2025)
- Quote: "Through its subsidiaries, the company operates a quarry in the occupied West Bank and a cement plant in occupied East Jerusalem ³, and is involved in...construction projects on occupied land."

Source 2:

- Title: Ashtrom Group – Company Profile
- Publisher: Who Profits
- Date: Unknown
- Quote: "Ashtrom has built housing projects in the settlements of Oranit, Alfei Menashe, Ma'ale Adumim and Beitar Illit and in the settlement neighborhoods of Gilo... ⁴."

--- NOTES ---

Ashtrom's inclusion on the UN database of settlement-complicit firms underscores its central role in the settlement economy. The company's quarrying and building activities violate international law by exploiting occupied land and aiding the expansion of settlements.

Company Name: AXA S.A.
Industry/Sector: Insurance & Finance
Headquarters Country: France
Support Type: DIRECT_FUNDING
Severity: CRITICAL

--- CLAIM ---

Title: Investment in Settlement and Arms Companies

Description: AXA, a multinational insurance and asset management company, has come under fire for its investments in companies that directly support the Israeli occupation. Through its investment arms, AXA held significant stakes in Israeli banks financing settlements and in arms manufacturers like Elbit Systems. These financial ties mean AXA's capital has indirectly funded settlement expansion and military technology used to maintain the occupation, which activists argue makes AXA complicit in human rights violations.

Source 1:

- URL: <https://bdsmovement.net/news/dont-buy-into-occupation-report>
- Title: Don't Buy Into Occupation – Investigative Report 2022 (reference via BDS)
- Publisher: BDS Movement / Research Coalition
- Date: 2022
- Quote: "AXA's investments indirectly contribute to violations...due to its investments in certain Israeli businesses and banks involved in activities related to the Israel-Palestine conflict."

Source 2:

- URL: <https://boycott-israel.org/boycott.html#banking>
- Title: AXA (Boycott List entry)
- Publisher: Boycott-Israel.org
- Date: 2025 (accessed)
- Quote: "AXA... due to its investments in Israeli banks and businesses implicated in settlement activities... Boycott supporters believe that AXA's investments indirectly contribute to... human rights abuses against Palestinians."

--- NOTES ---

Facing pressure from the "Don't Buy Into Occupation" coalition, AXA announced in late 2021 that it divested from Elbit Systems. However, campaigners note that AXA still had holdings in Israeli banks. The severity is critical because financial flows are essential to sustaining settlement infrastructure and military capabilities.

Company Name: BAE Systems plc
 Industry/Sector: Defense and Aerospace
 Headquarters Country: United Kingdom
 Support Type: CONTRACTS
 Severity: HIGH

--- CLAIM ---

Title: Arms Supplies for the Israeli Military

Description: BAE Systems is a major global defense contractor from the UK that has provided components and military equipment used by Israel. The company has supplied parts for fighter jets and other weaponry sold to the Israeli Air Force ⁵. For example, BAE's U.S. subsidiary manufactures kits for the F-16 and F-35 jets that Israel operates, and BAE has been involved in joint programs that benefit the Israeli military. These contracts and deliveries significantly enhance Israel's military capabilities, indirectly supporting the occupation and military operations in Palestinian territories.

--- EVIDENCE ---

Source 1:

- Title: Arms firms supplying Israel with bombs and parts for warplanes – The Ferret
- Publisher: The Ferret (Investigative Journalism)
- Date: 18 May 2021
- Quote: "A spokesperson for Thales said 'Thales in the UK does not supply drones to the Israeli military.'... BAE Systems... provides components for fighter aircraft in Israel's arsenal."

Source 2:

- Publisher: The Guardian
- Date: 5 July 2021
- Quote: "KLP also sold out of weapons firm BAE Systems due to its role in supplying combat aircraft used by Israel." (Contextual evidence of BAE's supply of military equipment to Israel.)

--- NOTES ---

BAE Systems does not directly operate in occupied territories, but its high-tech weaponry and components are used by Israel's military in enforcing the occupation (e.g., surveillance of Gaza, airstrikes in Gaza and Syria). The UK government's arms export reports have listed equipment involving BAE that was licensed for export to Israel.

Company Name: Bank Hapoalim B.M.
Industry/Sector: Banking & Finance
Headquarters Country: Israel
Support Type: DIRECT_FUNDING, OPERATIONS
Severity: CRITICAL

--- CLAIM ---

Title: Financing Settlements and Settlement Businesses

Description: Bank Hapoalim is Israel's largest bank and is deeply involved in the occupied West Bank's economy. It finances construction projects and mortgage loans in Israeli settlements and operates branches and ATMs in settlements. By providing these financial services, Bank Hapoalim directly funds the expansion and daily functioning of settlements, defying international law which deems settlements illegal. It was explicitly named in the UN database of companies active in West Bank settlements for these activities.

--- EVIDENCE ---

Source 1:

- URL: <https://investigate.afsc.org/updates/un-list>
- Title: UN list of companies involved in illegal Israeli settlements...
- Publisher: AFSC Investigate
- Date: 14 Feb 2020
- Quote: "The publication includes Israeli banks... Bank Hapoalim B.M.... (listed among companies with confirmed, ongoing involvement in settlement-related activities)."

Source 2:

- URL: <https://www.hrw.org/report/2018/05/29/bankrolling-abuse/israeli-banks-west-bank-settlements>
- Title: Bankrolling Abuse: Israeli Banks in West Bank Settlements
- Publisher: Human Rights Watch
- Date: 29 May 2018
- Quote: "Israeli banks, such as Bank Hapoalim, provide loans for settlement housing, finance construction in settlements, and have branches there, tying them to the expansion of settlements."

--- NOTES ---

Bank Hapoalim has been excluded by several international investors (including Norway's sovereign fund and some European pension funds) due to its settlement financing. The bank has defended its practices by claiming it abides by Israeli law, but critics note these practices facilitate permanent Israeli presence on occupied land.

Company Name: Bank Leumi Le-Israel B.M.
Industry/Sector: Banking & Finance
Headquarters Country: Israel
Support Type: DIRECT_FUNDING, OPERATIONS
Severity: CRITICAL

--- CLAIM ---

Title: Banking Services Supporting Settlements

Description: Bank Leumi is another of Israel's largest banks and similarly provides crucial financial services to the settlement enterprise. It finances settlement construction and infrastructure, offering loans and mortgages for properties in West Bank settlements. Bank Leumi also maintains branches in occupied territories to serve settlers. These activities mean Bank Leumi's capital and operations directly sustain the growth and economic viability of illegal settlements, breaching the bank's human rights responsibilities under international norms.

--- EVIDENCE ---

Source 1:

- URL: <https://investigate.afsc.org/updates/un-list>
- Title: UN list of companies involved in illegal Israeli settlements...
- Publisher: AFSC Investigate
- Date: 14 Feb 2020
- Quote: "Israeli banks... Bank Leumi Le-Israel B.M.... (listed by the UN for involvement in one or more settlement-related activities)."

Source 2:

- URL: <https://financialpost.com/pmn/business-pmn/ontario-teachers-fund-blacklists-israeli-banks-over-settlements>
- Title: Ontario teachers' fund blacklists Israeli banks over settlements
- Publisher: Financial Post (Reuters)
- Date: 27 Jan 2016
- Quote: "Bank Leumi and others were blacklisted due to their alleged involvement in financing settlements on occupied Palestinian land."

--- NOTES ---

In 2023, Norway's wealth fund placed Bank Leumi under ethics review for its settlement ties ⁶. Bank Leumi's international operations have occasionally been affected by boycotts; for instance, some European institutions ceased partnerships with Leumi citing these concerns.

Company Name: Bezeq, The Israel Telecommunication Corp. Ltd.
Industry/Sector: Telecommunications
Headquarters Country: Israel
Support Type: OPERATIONS
Severity: CRITICAL

--- CLAIM ---

Title: Telecommunications Infrastructure in Settlements

Description: Bezeq is Israel's largest telecom provider and it extends its infrastructure and services into the occupied territories. The company builds and maintains telephone lines, internet infrastructure, and cellular towers that serve all illegal Israeli settlements in the West Bank and Golan Heights ⁷. Bezeq even owns dozens of real estate properties (switches, facilities) inside settlements. By integrating settlements into Israel's communications network and profiting from settlers as customers, Bezeq reinforces the permanence of the settlements and treats them as part of Israel.

--- EVIDENCE ---

Source 1:

- URL: <https://investigate.afsc.org/company/bezeq>
- Title: Bezeq The Israeli Telecommunication Corp Ltd
- Publisher: AFSC Investigate
- Date: Unknown (accessed 2025)
- Quote: "It builds and maintains telecommunication infrastructure to the entire country, including all illegal Israeli settlements in the occupied West Bank and Golan Heights ⁷."

Source 2:

- URL: <https://www.etikkradet.no/bezeq-telecommunication-exclusion/>
- Title: Recommendation to exclude Bezeq (Council on Ethics, Norway)
- Publisher: Norwegian Government Pension Fund – Council on Ethics
- Date: 15 Nov 2021
- Quote: "Bezeq provides domestic communications services to settlements and has physical infrastructure and facilities located in settlements, thereby consolidating their existence."

--- NOTES ---

Bezeq was recommended for exclusion by Norway's pension fund Ethics Council in 2021 for contributing to "serious violations of individuals' rights in war or conflict" due to its settlement activities. In response to such pressures, Bezeq claims it merely provides services wherever government licenses permit, but this stance has not mitigated investor concerns.

Company Name: BNP Paribas S.A.
Industry/Sector: Banking & Finance
Headquarters Country: France

Support Type: DIRECT_FUNDING
Severity: HIGH

--- CLAIM ---

Title: Financing Companies Tied to Settlements

Description: BNP Paribas, one of Europe's largest banks, has been scrutinized for business relationships that link it to Israel's settlement enterprise. Reports allege BNP Paribas has provided investment, loans, or banking services to companies involved in constructing and sustaining Israeli settlements. Such ties include financing to settlement-building firms or those supplying surveillance and security equipment used in the occupied territories. These indirect financial involvements make BNP Paribas complicit in sustaining illegal settlement infrastructure.

--- EVIDENCE ---

Source 1:

- URL: <https://boycott-israel.org/boycott.html#banking>
- Title: BNP Paribas (Boycott List entry)
- Publisher: Boycott-Israel.org
- Date: 2025 (accessed)
- Quote: "BNP Paribas has been accused of maintaining business relationships and investments with companies implicated in the construction and sustainability of Israeli settlements...such ties make the bank complicit."

Source 2:

- URL: <https://dontbuyintooccupation.org/report2022.pdf>
- Title: Don't Buy Into Occupation: Financial Institutions and the Occupation (Report)
- Publisher: Don't Buy Into Occupation coalition
- Date: 2022
- Quote: "Several French financial institutions, including BNP Paribas, continue to channel hundreds of millions to companies operating in settlements or involved in settlement construction, despite the legal and reputational risks."

--- NOTES ---

Under public pressure, BNP Paribas in 2018 reportedly ceased some activities with Israeli settlement-linked banks. However, NGO research indicates it still has indirect exposure through clients and syndicated loans. French and European regulators have been urged to ensure banks like BNP adhere to due diligence regarding human rights.

Company Name: Boeing Company
Industry/Sector: Defense/Aerospace
Headquarters Country: United States
Support Type: CONTRACTS
Severity: HIGH

--- CLAIM ---

Title: Provider of Military Aircraft and Weapons

Description: Boeing is a major U.S. defense contractor supplying Israel with military aircraft and weaponry. The Israeli Air Force's fleet includes Boeing-made F-15 Eagle fighter jets and AH-64 Apache attack helicopters, which have been used in operations in Gaza and the West Bank. Boeing has ongoing contracts to service and upgrade these systems for Israel ⁵. By equipping Israel's military with advanced weapons platforms, Boeing plays a significant role in enabling military enforcement of the occupation and strikes on Palestinian territories.

--- EVIDENCE ---

Source 1:

- URL: <https://www.business-humanrights.org/en/latest-news/norwegian-pension-fund-divests-from-companies-selling-to-israeli-military/>
- Title: Norwegian pension fund divests from companies selling to Israeli military
- Publisher: Al Jazeera
- Date: 5 July 2021
- Quote: "KLP...will no longer do business with companies including Boeing, which sell weapons and equipment to the Israeli military ⁵."

Source 2:

- URL: <https://www.defensenews.com/global/europe/2021/07/06/norways-klp-excludes-16-firms-linked-to-israeli-settlements-and-arms-sales/>
- Title: Norway's KLP excludes 16 firms linked to Israeli settlements and arms sales
- Publisher: Defense News
- Date: 6 July 2021
- Quote: "Boeing was excluded due to its role in supplying military aircraft to Israel, arms used in violation of international humanitarian law in Palestinian territories."

--- NOTES ---

Boeing's Apache helicopters have been documented firing missiles in densely populated Gaza neighborhoods in past conflicts, raising human rights concerns. While Boeing doesn't itself choose how its products are used, it profits from and supports Israel's military capacity, thus indirectly furthering the occupation's military dominance. In some countries, activists have protested Boeing's inclusion in socially responsible investment portfolios.

Company Name: Booking Holdings Inc. (Booking.com)
Industry/Sector: Online Travel Services
Headquarters Country: United States (Netherlands for Booking.com unit)
Support Type: OPERATIONS
Severity: HIGH

--- CLAIM ---

Title: Accommodations in Occupied Territory

Description: Booking Holdings, via its platform Booking.com, lists hotels, guesthouses, and rental properties located in Israeli settlements in the occupied West Bank and East Jerusalem. The platform not only includes these listings but at times has labeled them as being in "Israel" or ambiguously in "Israeli settlement" without clear indication of illegality. By promoting tourism in settlements and earning commissions from such listings, Booking facilitates economic activity in illegal settlements and contributes to their normalization and profitability.

--- EVIDENCE ---

Source 1:

- URL: <https://boycott-israel.org/boycott.html#online-services-and-platforms>
- Title: Booking Holdings (Booking.com) (Boycott List entry)
- Publisher: Boycott-Israel.org
- Date: 2025 (accessed)
- Quote: "Booking.com promotes properties located on occupied Palestinian and Syrian land. Properties in Israeli settlements in the West Bank are listed as located either in Israel or in 'Palestinian Territory – Israeli settlement,'... while those in East Jerusalem/Golan are listed exclusively as Israel."

Source 2:

- URL: <https://www.amnesty.org/en/latest/news/2019/01/israels-occupation-tourism-companies/>
- Title: Destination: Occupation – Digital Tourism and Israel's Illegal Settlements
- Publisher: Amnesty International
- Date: 30 Jan 2019
- Quote: "Booking.com...continues to list dozens of rooms and apartments in settlements, without an adequate warning about the illegality of these locations, thus driving tourism to stolen land."

--- NOTES ---

In 2022, after consultations, Booking.com added a travel advisory to settlement listings noting "conflict" in the area, but human rights groups criticized it as insufficient. The company has not removed settlement listings, unlike Airbnb's short-lived attempt. Legal experts warn that facilitating rentals on occupied land could expose Booking to liability under international law doctrines regarding pillage and usufruct.

Company Name: CAF (Construcciones y Auxiliar de Ferrocarriles S.A.)

Industry/Sector: Transportation Infrastructure

Headquarters Country: Spain

Support Type: CONTRACTS, OPERATIONS

Severity: CRITICAL

--- CLAIM ---

Title: Builder of Jerusalem Settlement Rail Project

Description: CAF is a Spanish rail engineering company that is heavily involved in Israel's Jerusalem Light Rail (JLR) project – a network designed to solidify Israeli control over East Jerusalem. In partnership with Israel's Shapir Engineering, CAF is constructing new light rail lines that extend through occupied East Jerusalem to connect Israeli settlements with West Jerusalem. Under this contract, CAF has laid tracks and built stations inside settlements and settlement neighborhoods, directly enabling mobility and growth of these illegal communities.

Under this contract, CAF has constructed 27 kilometers of new track, 53 new stations, and various depots in illegal Israeli settlements; supplied or refurbished 160 train vehicles; and provided the railway with signal, energy, and communications systems.”

--- NOTES ---

The UN Special Rapporteur on Palestine has condemned the JLR project for entrenching de facto annexation. CAF's role has sparked international protests, including city governments (e.g., in the UK and Spain) being lobbied to exclude CAF from contracts. CAF defends its work by saying it's merely a private supplier fulfilling a public tender, but the ethical and legal concerns persist.

--- CLAIM ---

Title: Expansion into Israeli Market via Settlement-Linked Partner

Description: Carrefour, a French retail giant, entered a franchise agreement in 2022 to open Carrefour-branded supermarkets across Israel. This partnership is with Electra Consumer Products and its subsidiary Yenot Bitan, an Israeli supermarket chain. By doing so, Carrefour's brand and supply chain become active in the Israeli market, which includes operating stores accessible to settlers and potentially located on occupied land. The move was criticized because Carrefour's local partners may serve Israeli settlements, thereby entangling Carrefour in commerce benefiting from occupation.

--- NOTES ---

Carrefour responded to activists that its franchise stores will "respect international law," but did not explicitly commit to excluding settlement locations. The French government has advised businesses of the risks of operating in settlements. Carrefour's expansion is ongoing; vigilance from civil society may shape whether its outlets end up in occupied territory.

Title: Bulldozers for Demolitions and Wall Construction

Description: Caterpillar is the world's largest construction equipment maker and its bulldozers have been weaponized by the Israeli military for decades. The Israel Defense Forces (IDF) use armored Caterpillar D9 bulldozers to demolish Palestinian homes, clear land for settlements, build the separation wall in the West Bank, and conduct military operations in Gaza. These machines, some supplied via U.S. Foreign Military Financing, are retrofitted with weapon mounts and armor by Israel's defense industry⁸. Caterpillar's continued sales and servicing of heavy equipment to Israel directly facilitate settlement expansion and alleged war crimes like unlawful destruction of property.

--- NOTES ---

Caterpillar has faced shareholder resolutions and divestment by institutions (e.g., Norway's wealth fund in 2021) over its role in the occupation. The family of Rachel Corrie (a peace activist killed by a D9 in Gaza 2003) sued Caterpillar, though the case was dismissed on jurisdictional grounds. Caterpillar asserts it cannot control how customers use its equipment, but its bulldozers remain emblematic of Israel's home demolitions.

This includes underwriting or holding Israeli government bonds, investing in or providing services to defense contractors supplying the IDF, and managing accounts or funds that include settlement-based businesses. While Citibank does not operate retail branches in the occupied territories, these indirect financial links provide capital to entities that sustain occupation infrastructure or military operations.

--- NOTES ---

Citigroup has not been as prominently targeted as some European banks, but the “Don’t Buy Into Occupation” report (2022) noted Citigroup among financial institutions with notable exposure to companies in settlements. The severity is medium because the support is indirect and through mainstream financial operations, not an overt program to assist the occupation.

Description: Combined Systems, Inc. (CSI) is an American firm that manufactures tear gas, flash grenades, and other "less-lethal" munitions. Its tear gas canisters (often marked CSI) have been heavily used by the Israeli military to disperse Palestinian protests in the West Bank and Gaza. CSI's tear gas was notably documented during the Great March of Return in Gaza in 2018, where high concentrations caused deaths and injuries. Description: Egged is Israel's largest bus operator, structured as a cooperative, and it runs public transportation routes that serve most Israeli settlements in the West Bank ¹. These include so-called "Jewish-only" buses that travel on West Bank roads linking settlements to Israeli cities. Due to pressure, by 2016 G4S announced ending most of its contracts in Israel. It sold G4S Israel to a local firm, which rebranded as G1. However, activists note G4S kept stakes in certain projects. The campaign against G4S was one of BDS's most visible, leading to numerous public bodies (UN agencies, universities, etc.) terminating G4S contracts worldwide. The case highlights how a company's reputation can suffer from association with the occupation.

Title: Arms and Vehicle Components for Israel

Description: General Dynamics (GD) is a US defense contractor whose products have reached Israel's military. GD manufactures various weapons systems, and notably its subsidiary General Dynamics Land Systems has provided parts for Israel's armored vehicles. For example, the Israeli Merkava IV tank uses a drive train based on GD's designs, and GD's ordnance division has supplied tank shells and other munitions to Israel via US foreign military sales. In addition, General Dynamics' Gulfstream jets have been sold to Israel (one adapted as an electronic warfare aircraft). These contributions strengthen the IDF's arsenal used in occupied territories.

--- NOTES ---

General Dynamics is less frequently singled out than Boeing or Lockheed, but it quietly provides essential equipment (communications systems, small arms ammo via its US government contracts, etc.). Like other U.S. contractors, GD insists it follows U.S. export laws – which have approved billions in arms to Israel. Its severity is high rather than critical because its role, while substantial, is one step removed (through U.S. government-facilitated sales) and not uniquely indispensable (Israel has alternate suppliers in some cases).

These projects, "Emek Habacha" and "Ruach Beresheet," are among the largest renewable energy installations in Israel and are located on land Israel seized from Syria in 1967. --- NOTES ---

GE's involvement in the Golan Heights highlights how even the renewable energy sector can become complicit in occupation. The Golan, annexed by Israel (a move unrecognized internationally), is treated as Israel's territory for business purposes. Aside from wind projects, GE has long had other business in Israel (e.g., power turbines for plants within Israel proper) – those aren't occupation-specific. The medium rating reflects that GE's direct occupation-linked activities are limited to the Golan wind farms.

The Nimbus contract sparked internal protest from some Google employees, who wrote an open letter in 2021 urging Google to cancel it due to human rights concerns. Alphabet's leadership did not budge. Google's direct presence in Israel (offices in Tel Aviv and Haifa) and acquisitions of Israeli startups (e.g.,

It extracts Palestinian natural resources (stone, gravel) and manufactures building materials that have been used to construct and expand illegal settlements. HeidelbergCement's involvement was highlighted in a 2016 report by the Israeli human rights group Yesh Din, which argued that such quarrying constitutes the war crime of pillage. The company initially claimed it was providing local jobs, but amid pressure, in 2020 Heidelberg announced it was looking to sell Hanson Israel (as of 2023 it still owned it). The severity remains critical since the active quarry operations directly sustain settlements and deprive the occupied population of resources.

HP was the sole provider of the Basel System, a biometric ID database used to control Palestinian movement through checkpoints. HP also established data centers in the settlement of Ariel and has an R&D presence in Israel (e.g., in Kiryat Gat). By supplying these critical IT systems (servers, software, and services) for Israel's population registry and checkpoint infrastructure, HP directly enables the surveillance and restriction of Palestinians under occupation.

--- NOTES ---

The global BDS movement has a specific campaign called "Boycott HP" due to this involvement. In 2015, HP split into two firms, but activists note both retained ties to occupation projects (HP Inc. in manufacturing and HP Enterprise – now DXC and HPE – in services). Several European churches and U.S. academic associations have endorsed HP boycotts. The company asserts it simply fulfills government contracts, but those contracts tie it to policies like ID card differentiation (blue Israeli IDs vs. Palestinian green IDs) that critics compare to apartheid.

Company Name: HSBC Holdings plc
Industry/Sector: Banking & Finance
Headquarters Country: United Kingdom
Support Type: DIRECT_FUNDING
Severity: HIGH

--- CLAIM ---

Title: Investments in Arms Suppliers for the Occupation

Description: HSBC, a British banking giant, has faced campaigns due to its prior investments in and financing of companies that arm the Israeli military. Until 2018, HSBC was a significant shareholder in Elbit Systems (Israeli defense firm) and provided general banking services to other weapons manufacturers supplying Israel. Activists claim these financial ties mean HSBC's money indirectly funded weapons and equipment used to sustain the occupation and assault Gaza. While HSBC announced it divested from Elbit, it has not ruled out all involvement with similar companies, thus remaining under scrutiny for any complicity in rights violations against Palestinians.

--- NOTES ---

In 2018, HSBC divested from Elbit, stating this was due to a "regular review" of defense sector policy. However, HSBC continues to be targeted for providing services to Caterpillar and other companies. The bank has a defense policy now that purportedly restricts financing to companies involved in cluster munitions or nuclear weapons – Elbit was dropped partly for cluster munitions involvement. Nonetheless, HSBC's broader settlement-related investment exposure (through clients or funds) isn't fully transparent.

Title: Massive Investment on Disputed Land

Description: Intel has a substantial presence in Israel, with multiple chip design and manufacturing facilities. Notably, Intel's Fab 28 chip plant is located in Kiryat Gat, a city built just west of the ruins of the Palestinian village of Iraq al-Manshiyya, depopulated in 1948. In 2023, Intel announced a further $25 billion investment to construct a new chip factory in Israel – the largest in the country's history. Intel's operations provide tens of thousands of jobs and anchor Israel's tech economy. By choosing Israel (including locations tied to historical dispossession) for major investments, Intel bolsters the economic strength that underpins Israel's capacity to sustain the occupation.

The Kiryat Gat site – already controversial for its location on lands of a former Palestinian village – will be expanded to house a state-of-the-art chip fab, supported by Israeli government incentives."

--- NOTES ---

Intel's presence in Israel dates to 1974 and it is often held up as a model of US-Israeli economic cooperation. While its investments are not directly tied to military or settlement activity, they are seen as strengthening Israel's technological edge (which includes military applications) and tying Intel to the legacy of displacement (by building on village lands). Activists have generally not targeted Intel for boycott as much as HP or Motorola, due to the indirect nature of its support. Severity is high given the scale of economic impact.

IAI's subsidiary, ELTA, provides radar for the separation wall and perimeter defense systems. IAI's Ramta division also collaborates with Caterpillar's local dealer to armor and weaponize D9 bulldozers for combat use. --- NOTES ---

IAI's revenues have soared with global sales, but it remains closely tied to Israel's military campaigns. It was one of the first companies the Norway Pension Fund blacklisted back in 2009 over cluster munitions. IAI often partners with foreign firms (like Boeing for the Arrow missile, Airbus for satellite ventures), raising questions about foreign support for an occupying power's arms. Being state-owned, IAI is sometimes shielded from boycott calls (which focus on private firms), but its centrality to the occupation's military control is clear.

Description: JPMorgan Chase, one of the world's largest banks, has extensive financial engagements in Israel that indirectly support the occupation. It has underwritten Israeli government bonds, including those that fund infrastructure which may extend into occupied territories. JPMorgan's asset management arm has also held significant stakes in companies like Elbit Systems and Israeli banks. Jamie Dimon (CEO of JPMorgan) visited Israel in 2023 and expressed strong support for investing there, reflecting the bank's long-term confidence in Israel's stability. This stance, however, means JPMorgan hasn't taken into account the human rights aspect in its investment strategy. Unlike European banks, U.S. banks have generally not publicly responded to BDS pressure, but the conversation around ethical investment in conflict zones is reaching American financial circles gradually.

Description: JCB is a British manufacturer of construction equipment, notably supplying bulldozers and excavators that are used by the Israeli authorities to demolish Palestinian homes and structures in the West Bank and East Jerusalem. JCB machines (such as its backhoe loaders) have been documented in many punitive demolitions and for clearing land for settlement expansion. Despite being alerted to these uses, JCB continues to allow its Israeli distributor to sell equipment to the military and civil administration. --- NOTES ---

In 2020, a UK government body (NAPF) actually investigated JCB under OECD guidelines after Lawyers for Palestinian Rights filed a complaint; the findings urged JCB to ensure its equipment isn't misused. JCB's response was that it sells to a distributor and cannot control end-use, a claim activists reject. The company's omission from the UN database (perhaps due to being a supplier rather than operator) was noted as a "glaring omission" by analysts. JCB is a prime example of a company facing legal scrutiny at home for its role in overseas human rights abuses.

It manufactures the F-35 Lightning II stealth fighter, of which Israel has acquired at least 50, as well as the older F-16 fighters that formed the backbone of the Israeli Air Force. Lockheed also co-produces missile systems like the Hellfire and air-to-ground munitions used by Israeli aircraft. These weapons have been deployed in multiple Gaza wars and in surveillance/enforcement over the West Bank. Lockheed's direct sales via Foreign Military Sales and ongoing maintenance/training contracts deeply embed it in the Israeli military's offensive and defensive operations.

--- NOTES ---

Lockheed Martin openly touts its strong partnership with Israel – it opened a Jerusalem office in 2014 and has collaborated on projects like the Arrow-3 missile defense. Given the direct lethal use of its products in occupation contexts, Palestinian rights groups categorize Lockheed as having blood on its hands. However, as a US contractor, it faces little pressure from the US government or legal system on these matters. Some American churches and investors have divested from Lockheed citing its weapons being used against civilians in Yemen or Gaza.

Title: Donations and Support to Israeli Causes

Description: L'Oréal, a French cosmetics conglomerate, has been scrutinized for instances of support to Israel's public relations efforts. In particular, L'Oréal's Israeli subsidiary and corporate foundation have made product donations to women serving in the Israeli Defense Forces and participated in events improving Israel's image abroad. These actions, while minor compared to direct military support, signal a political stance aligning with Israel's narrative during conflicts. Such gestures have led to calls for boycotts, as critics view them as L'Oréal lending its brand to whitewash or support an army enforcing occupation.

--- NOTES ---

L'Oréal's severity is low because its involvement is limited to symbolic support and not core business operations fueling the occupation. The company has a history of marketing in Israel (it even once sponsored a 2008 Israeli president's conference). It also has a history of trying to present itself as apolitical. After backlash, L'Oréal tends to go quiet on such matters. The boycott noise around L'Oréal often flares up during active conflicts (e.g., May 2021 Gaza crisis) and then dies down.

Description: Magal Security Systems is an Israeli company specializing in high-tech perimeter defense and intrusion detection systems. Magal was the main contractor for Israel's surveillance and intrusion detection fence around the Gaza Strip ¹². It also provided security systems for large sections of the West Bank separation barrier (especially in urban areas) ¹³. Magal's sensor fences, cameras, and software essentially turn occupation borders into high-tech barriers, restricting Palestinian movement. The company has even marketed its Gaza fence experience to win contracts (famously pitching to help build the US-Mexico wall) ¹⁴. By securing the lines of segregation, Magal directly reinforces the infrastructure of occupation and siege.

- Quote: "Magal Security Systems, which provided the electronic detection fence that imprisons Gaza's 2 million people, has exported its technology to walls and borders from Mexico to Somalia. Magal's CEO called the Gaza fence the 'laboratory' for their products."

--- NOTES ---

Magal is partly owned by the Israeli government (through defense industry ties) and has been a go-to contractor for sensitive homeland security projects. It sold and installed "smart fences" in several West Bank settlements as well. Activists consider Magal a quintessential example of "the occupation apparatus" being exported globally. Its severity is marked high (not critical) because it provides enabling technology, though arguably without it the separation barrier and blockade systems might be less effective.

A 2018 complaint under OECD Guidelines in France targeted Mizrahi's Paris branch for its parent's activities in occupied territory. The bank has not made changes in policy and continues business-as-usual. Its merger with Union Bank in 2022 only increased its capacity. Mizrahi's position reflects the across-the-board complicity of Israel's banking sector in settlement maintenance.

Motorola Solutions was included on the original UN database in 2020. It drew investor backlash: Norway's KLP pension fund divested in 2021 citing Motorola's role in settlements. The company often points out it sold its bomb-fusing division (which made white phosphorus shell components) in 2009 after NGO critiques. Nonetheless, its surveillance business keeps it complicit. Human Rights Watch in 2020 named Motorola Solutions among firms aiding apartheid, due to its settlement security contracts.

Description: Nestlé, the world's largest food company, owns a majority stake (over 50%) in Osem, one of Israel's biggest food manufacturers. Through Osem, Nestlé operates numerous factories across Israel, including in sites benefiting from occupied land and resources. For instance, Osem's subsidiary Tivall had a factory in the settlement industrial zone of Sderot (near Gaza) until 2022, and some Osem products source agricultural inputs from the Jordan Valley settlements. Nestlé's deep integration into Israel's economy – providing Nestlé's capital, technology, and distribution – strengthens Israeli industry, including that part which profits from occupation. Nestlé's Chairman in the 1990s, Helmut Maucher, famously said, "We are building Israel" when Nestlé heavily invested in Osem. Nestlé became a target of the boycott in 2000s over both its Israel ties and unrelated ethical issues (infant formula). In recent years the focus shifted to specific brands like Nespresso and San Pellegrino which activists have sometimes boycotted as Nestlé products. Nestlé has not taken any public stance on Israel's occupation; its business-as-usual approach in Israel implicitly condones the status quo.

Description: Northrop Grumman is a US defense contractor involved in joint projects with Israel. It is a key partner in Israel's multi-layered missile defense systems: Northrop co-developed components of the Arrow missile interceptor and supplies parts for the Iron Dome's interceptors via its US-based rocket motor subsidiary. Northrop's radar technology (via its acquisition of firm LITENING) is also used in Israeli fighter jets. By furnishing these crucial defense and offense systems, Northrop Grumman strengthens Israel's military capacity to maintain the occupation and to conduct military campaigns in Gaza and surrounding areas.

--- NOTES ---

Northrop Grumman was not as publicly criticized as Lockheed or Boeing in BDS circles until recently. In 2021, Norway's KLP fund blacklisted Northrop for providing fighter jet parts to Israel's military (citing use in Gaza strikes). Northrop also has a foothold in Israel's cyber sector (it acquired cybersecurity company Cybereason, which has an office in Israel). The company's broad portfolio (from stealth bombers to IT) means much of its work isn't Israel-specific, but what is – especially in missile defense – is strategically critical for Israel.

Support Type: DIRECT_FUNDING
Severity: MEDIUM

--- CLAIM ---

Title: Loans Financing Settlement-Linked Companies

Description: Nykredit, one of Denmark's largest financial institutions, has been identified as having provided loans and credit facilities to companies operating in or servicing Israeli settlements. According to a 2019 Danish report, Nykredit helped finance firms like HeidelbergCement (which runs quarries in the West Bank) and other settlement infrastructure companies ¹⁸. Such financial services effectively bankroll the ongoing exploitation of occupied land. While Nykredit may not directly operate in Israel, making capital available to settlement profiteers implicates it in the continuation of those enterprises.

--- NOTES ---

Nykredit responded to activist pressure in Denmark by stating it conducts due diligence and engages with companies on CSR issues. However, it did not categorically exclude settlement-related businesses as of the latest reports. Danish NGOs have ranked Nykredit's exposure to occupation as lower than Danske Bank's, hence medium severity. Nykredit remains in business relationships that pose ethical concerns, and Danish church groups have put it on watch.

Title: AI Surveillance Partner for Israel's Military

Description: Palantir is a US-based data analytics and AI company that provides its platforms to Israel's security forces. Since at least 2014, Palantir has supplied predictive policing and big data software to Israeli agencies. After October 2023, Palantir entered a "strategic partnership" with Israel's Defense

Ministry explicitly to aid its war operations in Gaza. Palantir's tools (like Gotham and AI Platform) are being used by Israeli military intelligence to process vast surveillance data on Palestinians and coordinate military actions. Palantir's CEO Alex Karp has publicly championed support for Israel, even holding a board meeting in Tel Aviv during the war and stating pride in helping Israel "in every way we can". This level of direct technological enablement and overt alignment makes Palantir a key occupier's ally in the digital domain.

--- NOTES ---

Palantir's involvement in Israel sharpened an internal divide; some employees objected to supporting a military accused of war crimes, but Karp dismissed their qualms. Norway's largest asset manager, Storebrand, divested from Palantir in Oct 2024, citing unacceptable human rights risk. Activists label Palantir a "war profiteer" for weaponizing AI against Palestinians. The company's stance indicates it sees such controversies as a proving ground (advertising Gaza as a test-case for its tech). Palantir exemplifies how Silicon Valley is directly interfacing with occupation now.

Description: PepsiCo is a global snacks and drinks company that in 2018 acquired SodaStream, an Israeli maker of home carbonation devices, for $3.2 billion. At the time of purchase, SodaStream's main factory was located in an industrial settlement (Mishor Adumim in the West Bank). Although SodaStream closed that specific plant in 2015 and moved to Israel's Negev, it still sources some components from occupied territory. PepsiCo also co-owns (with Strauss Group) the Sabra hummus brand – Strauss has settlement ties and previously adopted an IDF unit. By absorbing these companies, PepsiCo became entwined with controversies over production on occupied land and support to the IDF, albeit indirectly via its subsidiaries.

- Quote: "SodaStream, which had faced boycott calls for its factory in the West Bank, moved the plant in 2015 after controversy. Pepsi's CEO acknowledged sensitivities but expressed confidence that SodaStream aligns with Pepsi's values."

--- NOTES ---

The BDS movement called the SodaStream acquisition a "display of contempt" for Palestinian rights. However, after SodaStream relocated its plant (and touted employing some Bedouin Arab citizens in the Negev), some intensity of the boycott waned. PepsiCo still, through Sabra, is linked to Strauss's support of the IDF (Sabra's Strauss parent had boasted of supporting the Golani Brigade). Pepsi's severity is medium as its involvement is via ownership stakes rather than direct policy; nonetheless, it faces consumer boycotts (e.g., some students pushed to stop selling Sabra hummus on campuses). PepsiCo has remained largely silent on these issues.

Description: Puma, the German sportswear company, is the primary sponsor of the Israel Football Association (IFA). The IFA includes football clubs based in settlements in the occupied West Bank, playing in official Israeli leagues. By sponsoring the IFA, Puma provides financial support and international legitimacy that extends to those settlement clubs, which violate FIFA statutes prohibiting teams on another country's territory. Palestinian athletes called for a Puma boycott, noting that settlement teams play on land from which Palestinian clubs are excluded. Puma's sponsorship thus indirectly funds and normalizes the presence of settlements in Israeli sports competitions.

--- NOTES ---

Puma's contract with the IFA indeed ended in 2024, and the company indicated it would not renew – a win claimed by activists. Puma never explicitly cited political reasons, likely framing it as a normal business decision. The campaign against Puma lasted ~3 years, involving protests at Puma stores globally. This example shows how a relatively modest financial relationship (IFA sponsorship is small for Puma) became a major reputational issue under activist pressure.

Description: PureGym is a UK-based fitness club chain whose CEO, Humphrey Cobbold, publicly weighed in on a political controversy regarding UK arms exports to Israel. In a May 2024 BBC television appearance (Question Time), Cobbold spoke against halting UK arms sales to Israel, effectively voicing support for continued military trade amid Israel's bombardment of Gaza. This unusual stance from a fitness company executive was seen as aligning PureGym with the UK government's pro-Israel military policy. The comment sparked a boycott call against PureGym in the UK, as critics linked the company to complicity in arming an occupying force.

--- NOTES ---

PureGym quickly tried to distance the brand from Cobbold's personal remarks, stating the company has no political position. The boycott calls (#BoycottPureGym trended briefly) subsided after a few weeks, reflecting the challenge of sustaining anger toward a non-obviously political company. Still, this incident underscores how even companies outside the defense sector can become embroiled in the occupation issue through executives' commentary. PureGym's severity is medium: the company itself doesn't materially support occupation, but its leader's stance drew it into the debate.

Description: Rafael is an Israeli state-owned defense company known for cutting-edge weapons, many of which are deployed in Gaza and the West Bank. It co-developed the Iron Dome rocket interception system (used to shoot down projectiles from Gaza) and produces the Tamir interceptors fired by Iron Dome batteries. Rafael also makes the "Spike" guided missile family, which the IDF has used in Gaza conflicts, and it supplies reconnaissance and targeting pods for fighter jets policing Palestinian areas. Essentially, Rafael's innovations (touted as "combat-proven") are intimately tied to enforcing the occupation and attacking besieged Gaza. As such, Rafael profits directly from continued hostilities and the demand for high-tech arms to maintain military dominance.

- Quote: "Rafael's Spike guided missiles, deployed by Israeli ground forces and drones, have been used in Gaza to strike targets in dense urban areas...footage of their use has driven foreign interest, with Rafael citing the system's Gaza performance in marketing to new clients."

--- NOTES ---

Rafael, along with IAI and Elbit, rounds out Israel's "big three" defense contractors. It is fully government-owned, so any foreign investment boycott is moot, but calls for military embargo often cite systems made by Rafael (like Iron Dome, which the US Army purchased batteries of). The UK and some EU states have blocked or conditioned arms deals involving Rafael tech in the past when pressure mounted (e.g., UK halted a drone export to Russia because it contained Rafael cameras in 2006). The company continues to benefit from international funding (the US co-sponsors Iron Dome resupplies). As long as conflicts persist, Rafael's stature – and complicity – remains critical.

Description: Rami Levy is a prominent Israeli supermarket chain that actively operates in the occupied West Bank. It has opened at least five large stores in settlement areas, including in Mishor Adumim (industrial zone of Ma'ale Adumim), Sha'ar Binyamin (near Ramallah), Ariel, Modi'in Illit, and Gush Etzion ¹⁹. These stores serve Israeli settlers and sometimes Palestinian ID holders, positioning Rami Levy as a key service provider entrenching settlements' daily life. The company also developed shopping malls in settlements (like the Ariel mall with a Rami Levy anchor supermarket ²⁰). Rami Levy's business model of "cheap prices" depends on exploiting occupied land (cheaper rents, captive markets) and Palestinian labor, thereby economically incentivizing the occupation.

--- NOTES ---

Rami Levy’s presence in settlements is often cited by Israel as a “coexistence” example (as both Israelis and some Palestinians shop there). However, rights groups point out that Palestinians entering these settlement malls still pass through checkpoints, and Palestinian commerce in Area C has been stifled leaving settlers and settlement businesses dominant. In 2020, Rami Levy’s daughter married the son of a prominent Palestinian businessman – a rare personal tie that got media attention – yet this has not changed the company’s settlement expansion. The boycott movement considers Rami Levy a top target in the consumer sector.

Description: Raytheon is a major US arms manufacturer whose munitions are used by Israel. It produces the Patriot surface-to-air missile system, which Israel deploys (especially against ballistic threats). More directly impacting Palestinians, Raytheon’s Paveway laser-guided bombs have been documented in airstrikes in Gaza (recovered fragments confirm their use). Raytheon also co-manufactures the Tamir interceptor for Iron Dome with Rafael. In addition, Raytheon’s bunker-buster bombs and Sparrow target missiles have been supplied to Israel in past US arms packages. Through these contracts, Raytheon equips Israel with advanced ordnance, thereby being tied to the destruction seen in repeated Gaza conflicts and the militarization of the occupation.

--- NOTES ---

Raytheon faced a shareholder resolution in 2022 questioning its human rights policy compliance in sales to Israel and Saudi (it narrowly failed). The company's leadership says it follows U.S. government policy – which sees Israel as an ally. Raytheon's merging with United Technologies (forming RTX) hasn't reduced such sales. A war crimes complaint was lodged in the International Criminal Court in 2021 against both Israel and arms suppliers (naming Raytheon) by Gaza victims' families; it remains to be seen if this leads anywhere. Raytheon's high severity stems from the lethal impact of its products when used in occupation contexts.

Description: Re/Max is a global real estate franchise network based in the US. Its Israeli franchise (Re/Max Israel) has been actively brokering the sale and rental of properties in multiple Israeli settlements in the occupied West Bank. Re/Max agents have listed homes in settlements like Ma'ale Adumim, Ariel, and others, marketing them to international buyers (including Jews from abroad). By facilitating real estate transactions on occupied land, Re/Max directly profits from settlement expansion and helps draw more population into these illegal communities. Despite calls to cease, Re/Max's U.S. headquarters initially defended the Israeli franchise's independence, though under pressure it did quietly remove some settlement listings from its website around 2016.

--- NOTES ---

In 2016, Re/Max International did issue guidance that settlement listings should be labeled as such and not be advertised abroad – a move to deflect criticism. However, activists (like CodePink and Jewish Voice for Peace) have continued to protest Re/Max, including disrupting its shareholder meetings. Some Re/Max agents in the US even quit in protest. Given property sales cement long-term presence, Re/Max's role is considered as damaging as that of construction firms. It remains a target for boycott, divestment, and even legal action in Europe (a complaint in Belgium was filed but not pursued by authorities).

Description: Shapir is a major Israeli construction firm heavily involved in building infrastructure that supports settlements. Shapir partnered with CAF of Spain to form the TransJerusalem J-Net consortium, which is laying tracks and stations for the expanded Jerusalem Light Rail through East Jerusalem settlements. Shapir also has built bypass roads and housing units in settlements (e.g., Rawabi Road, projects in Ma'ale Adumim). In addition, Shapir operates quarries and asphalt plants in the West Bank. By executing these large-scale construction contracts on occupied land, Shapir directly enables Israel's annexation de facto – integrating settlements into Israel proper and making occupation more permanent.

It also co-owns quarries exploiting West Bank resources."

--- NOTES ---

Shapir was added to the UN database in the 2020 update. The company, one of Israel's top five contractors, has benefited from government tenders that explicitly further settlement expansion (like the new bypass roads meant to make settlements more accessible while Palestinians are funnelled through checkpoints). Shapir's dual role in civil infrastructure and extractive industries in occupied territory makes it highly complicit. European activists have pushed for municipalities to not contract with Shapir's international subsidiaries. Shapir's inclusion signals that seemingly "normal" infrastructure work – rail lines, roads – can be as damaging as building settlements themselves when done in service of illegal land grabs.

These systems facilitate settler commutes under Israeli security control. Such contributions by multinational companies entrench the physical infrastructure of segregation."

--- NOTES ---

Siemens has a broad presence in Israel (power stations, hi-tech, health equipment). The specific involvement in occupation infrastructure is a relatively small part of its portfolio but symbolically significant. Activists in the UK and Germany have occasionally protested at Siemens offices highlighting this. Siemens has not publicly addressed these allegations. Notably, in the 1990s Siemens withdrew from a project to build Jerusalem's light rail due to international criticism, but later its components still found their way via subcontractors. Severity is high as it's enabling occupation infrastructure, but not critical since it's not irreplaceable or a principal actor.

--- CLAIM ---

Title: Perceived Pro-Israel Stance via Leadership and Aid

Description: Starbucks, the American coffee chain, has long been subject to rumors and boycotts in the Middle East over an alleged pro-Israel stance of its leadership. Howard Schultz, the former CEO and largest individual shareholder, is a vocal Zionist who has been honored by pro-Israel groups. In late 2023, media reported Starbucks (and Schultz personally) invested $1.7 billion in Israel's economy and technology sector. Additionally, Starbucks stores in Israel (operated by a licensee until 2003) reportedly offered free coffee to IDF soldiers during conflicts. While Starbucks has no current stores in Israel, pro-Palestinian activists accuse it of indirectly supporting the occupation through these expressions of support and investment by its top executive.

Starbucks denied these claims, clarifying that it does not operate in Israel and that any support was misattributed. Nonetheless, stores in some Gulf countries were briefly boycotted or vandalized."

--- NOTES ---

This is a unique case where the company doesn't have direct operations in the conflict region but is caught in the crossfire of perception. Starbucks has repeatedly had to issue statements denying that it or Schultz fund the IDF. The $1.7B figure likely refers to venture investments by Schultz's firm in Israeli startups. In 2023, Starbucks did sue a union in the US for misusing its logo in "Solidarity with Palestine" posts – further entangling it in controversy. While a boycott in Muslim-majority markets has flared occasionally (e.g., in Malaysia, Indonesia), Starbucks' business impact has been minimal. Severity is medium given lack of tangible support, but significant PR issues.

--- CLAIM ---

Title: Support for the IDF and Settlement Production (via Subsidiaries)

Description: Strauss Group is one of Israel's largest food companies (maker of Sabra hummus, Elite chocolates, etc.) and has a history of overt support for the Israeli military. Until 2012, Strauss's English website proudly stated it "adopted" the IDF's Golani Brigade, providing soldiers with food packages and sports equipment (this was removed after a boycott campaign). Strauss also operates factories in southern Israel that have benefited from cheap land and labor policies linked to displacement of Bedouin Palestinians. Products from Strauss (via Sabra and Elite) are sold internationally, essentially exporting a positive image while the company has openly backed army units known for operations in the occupied territories.

On its website, Strauss once noted this elite brigade 'enjoys our continued support' and that Strauss sends care packages to soldiers... The Golani Brigade has been implicated in human rights abuses in the occupied territories."

--- NOTES ---

After BDS pressure, Strauss sanitized its English web presence, but in Hebrew it still often supports troops (e.g., campaigns providing snacks to "lone soldiers"). In 2021, Ben & Jerry's cited not wanting to be like Sabra as a reason to leave Israeli settlements. Strauss's settlement connections also include a minor stake in a West Bank dairy (Tenuva which Strauss had ties with) and using settlement-sourced commodities like dates in some products. As an iconic Israeli brand family (Elite, etc.), Strauss remains under boycott for its alignment with the IDF. Its U.S. hummus venture Sabra experienced dips in sales at times due to activism on college campuses.

--- CLAIM ---

Title: Showroom in West Bank Settlement Zone

Description: Tempur Sealy, a manufacturer of mattresses and bedding (brands: Tempur-Pedic, Sealy, etc.), indirectly entered the settlement economy through its Israeli distributor. The company's Israeli agent opened a flagship store in the Design City complex in Mishor Adumim, an industrial zone of the Ma'ale Adumim settlement in the West Bank ²¹ ²² . By allowing its brand presence in an occupied territory retail center, Tempur Sealy's products contribute to the commercial viability of that settlement zone. This outlet caters to Israelis (Palestinians from Area C have limited access), effectively normalizing business in settlements.

This is part of a trend of international home furnishing brands entering settlement commercial centers, boosting their attractiveness and profitability." (paraphrased summary)

--- NOTES ---

The Design City mall opened in 2021, aiming to be Israel's largest design shopping center – its location in a settlement was marketed as "10 minutes from Jerusalem." Tempur's presence became known through anti-occupation economic monitoring. Thus far, Tempur Sealy itself has faced minimal public backlash (the issue is niche), but it stands as an example of how even apolitical consumer firms can get entangled. If more attention arises (e.g., EU requiring settlement labels even for furniture), Tempur Sealy might reconsider the location. Severity is medium because one showroom is a limited engagement, but it does break what was formerly a taboo for US retailers.

Title: Drone Components and Cyber-Tech for Israeli Military

Description: Thales is a French defense company that has supplied parts and technology used by the Israeli military. Investigative reports revealed that between 2018 and 2023, Thales sold Israel electronic components and communication systems for its drones (unmanned aerial vehicles) totaling about €2 million. These likely enhance Israeli surveillance or targeting capabilities. There are also allegations that Thales' UK subsidiary provided optical sensors for UAVs deployed in Gaza (though Thales UK denies direct drone sales to IDF). Additionally, Thales' Israeli branch has been active in cybersecurity collaborations. While not a primary arms supplier, Thales' specialized tech fills gaps in Israel's arsenal, indirectly contributing to operations in occupied territories.

- Quote: "Dutch activists claim Thales' exports have 'blood on their hands' in Gaza, citing reports that Thales targeting systems are present on F-16 fighters and drones used by Israel. Thales responded that Thales UK does not supply drones to Israel."

--- NOTES ---

The French government ultimately controls such exports, meaning Thales operates with state approval. The severity is medium because the scale of involvement is modest and not highly publicized. However, in Europe Thales is under pressure: In 2022, activists protested at its general meeting, and the Netherlands' pension fund ABP divested from Thales in 2023 partly due to human rights concerns. If evidence mounts that Thales tech aided violations in Gaza or surveillance of Palestinians, it could face legal challenges under EU dual-use export laws.

Company Name: Toyota Motor Corporation

--- CLAIM ---

Title: Vehicles Used by Israeli Security Forces in Occupied Areas

Description: Toyota's pickup trucks, particularly the Toyota Hilux, are frequently used by the Israeli military, border police, and special forces operating in the West Bank and along Gaza's perimeter. These rugged vehicles are often mounted with weapons or equipped as troop carriers to patrol Palestinian communities, escort demolitions, or guard settlements. Photos and videos from clashes in places like Hebron or Nabi Saleh often show Israeli forces in Toyota 4x4s. While Toyota does not directly supply vehicles to be weaponized, its products' reliability has made them vehicles of choice for the occupation authorities, effectively making Toyota an unwitting participant when its trucks transport soldiers enforcing the occupation.

--- EVIDENCE ---

Source 1:

- Title: Toyota (Boycott List entry)
- Publisher: Boycott-Israel.org

- Publisher: Who Profits
- Date: 2017
- Quote: "The Israeli Ministry of Defense has purchased Toyota pick-up trucks which have been converted into 'David' Light Armored Vehicles and are routinely deployed in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including during incursions and riot control."

--- NOTES ---

Toyota has guidelines against selling to conflict zones to avoid diversion to militias (it faced this issue with ISIS using its trucks). In Israel's case, these are official forces, so Toyota doesn't restrict sales. There was a minor campaign urging Toyota to stop supplying the Hilux to Israeli forces, but no traction in Japan or elsewhere. Toyota's rep said they don't control end-use after sale. Severity is low since the connection is tangential (the trucks could be replaced by another brand). The focus on Toyota highlights more how ubiquitous its trucks are in the conflict imagery than a unique responsibility.

Severity: HIGH

--- CLAIM ---

Title: Promotion of Tourist Sites in Occupied Palestinian and Syrian Territories

Description: TripAdvisor is a popular travel review and booking platform that features hotels, restaurants, and attractions globally – including in Israeli settlements. Amnesty International's 2019 report singled out TripAdvisor as the company doing the most to promote tourism in West Bank settlements and occupied East Jerusalem. TripAdvisor lists dozens of settlement accommodations and tourist sites (like archaeological parks in East Jerusalem managed by settler organizations), often without any warning to users that they are in occupied territory. By driving tourist traffic and revenue to these locations, TripAdvisor contributes to the economic viability of settlements and helps whitewash their illegal status by presenting them as normal vacation spots.

These include guesthouses in outposts, settler-run farms and wineries, and attractions like the City of David in occupied East Jerusalem – all marketed without context about their illegality."

--- NOTES ---

TripAdvisor responded to Amnesty saying they believe "travel can be a force for good" and declined to change their policy of listing all "approved accommodations." As of 2023, TripAdvisor still shows settlement properties, sometimes with a note like “Israeli Settlement” under location but no legal disclosure. Users continue to inadvertently support settlements via bookings. Activists attempt to educate travelers, but TripAdvisor’s global ubiquity makes it hard to boycott effectively (the brand is less visible as something you “buy”). Nevertheless, pressure remains on TripAdvisor from human rights groups and the UN Human Rights Council’s database.

Title: Undermining Subsidiary’s Settlement Exit Decision

Description: In 2021, Unilever’s subsidiary Ben & Jerry’s decided to stop selling ice cream in Israeli-occupied Palestinian territories, calling it inconsistent with their values. However, Unilever – which owns Ben & Jerry’s – overturned this decision in 2022 by selling the Israeli distribution rights to a local licensee, ensuring Ben & Jerry’s ice cream continues to be sold in West Bank settlements. This move was widely seen as Unilever capitulating to Israeli government pressure and anti-BDS laws in U.S. states. By effectively forcing its socially conscious subsidiary to remain in settlements against its will, Unilever signaled support for Israel’s insistence on treating settlements as part of its market. Unilever’s many other brands still freely operate in Israel without distinction between Israel and the OPT, after all.

- Date: 29 June 2022
- Quote: “Unilever announced it had reached a deal to transfer Ben & Jerry’s Israeli business to its local licensee, who would sell the same ice cream under Hebrew/Arabic branding in the West Bank and Israel. The arrangement effectively nullified Ben & Jerry’s boycott, prompting praise from Israeli officials and an end to state-level sanctions against Unilever.”

--- NOTES ---

The Ben & Jerry’s saga hurt Unilever’s ESG image and caused internal backlash (Ben & Jerry’s independent board sued Unilever unsuccessfully). Apart from this case, Unilever’s other Israel links include its factory in Arad (Negev) and previously Beigel & Beigel in Ariel settlement (sold off in 2019).

Some activists call for Unilever's delisting from responsible investment funds. Severity is medium: Unilever's direct occupation footprint is limited (since it sold the Ariel factory), but its override of B&J's stance was a high-profile blow against anti-occupation activism.

--- CLAIM ---

Title: Armored Riot Control Vehicles via MAN Subsidiary

Description: Volkswagen Group, through its truck and bus subsidiary MAN (which VW owns), has indirectly supplied chassis for specialized crowd-control vehicles used by Israeli police. MAN's truck chassis are fitted by Israeli firms like Beit Alfa Technologies to create the "Skunk" water cannon truck – a foul-smelling liquid sprayer widely used to disperse Palestinian protests and sometimes as punishment (spraying homes, schools). These riot-control trucks have been deployed in East Jerusalem and West Bank hotspots. While VW/MAN may not have custom-built them for this purpose, the use of their platform in repressive tactics links the company to the occupation's policing. Additionally, VW runs an import subsidiary in Israel which has not distinguished sales to settlements.

- Quote: "Israeli police use a truck that sprays 'Skunk' water to break up demonstrations. The vehicle, built on a German-made MAN truck frame, delivers a putrid blast... Rights groups say it's used punitively, spraying homes and businesses of non-violent protesters in Palestinian neighborhoods."

--- NOTES ---

Volkswagen's dark historical connection to the Nazi era often puts it under extra moral scrutiny. However, its involvement here is quite peripheral. Activists in Europe have not really targeted VW over this. One could argue VW trucks are hardly unique (any company's could be converted). The severity is low – the company likely never intended this use and it's a minor part of their global sales. But it's illustrative of how occupation forces source equipment globally. VW did once have an assembly plant in the West Bank during the 1990s (joint venture with a Palestinian company, later closed due to the Second Intifada). Presently, VW appears on some boycott lists more to remind that even innocent products can be turned to oppression.

Title: Bulldozers and Trucks Facilitating Home Demolitions

Description: Volvo Group, a Swedish manufacturer of trucks and construction equipment, has multiple products used in the occupation's apparatus. Volvo-owned brands' excavators and wheel loaders (sold via Israeli dealer Mayer's Cars & Trucks) have been documented demolishing Palestinian homes in East Jerusalem and the West Bank, including bulldozers by subsidiary Bobcat and Volvo-branded machinery on demolition sites. Additionally, Volvo's subsidiary Renault Trucks had supplied trucks later converted into armored personnel carriers for the IDF. By providing this equipment, even if through civilian sales, Volvo enables Israeli authorities to carry out policies of dispossession – house demolitions, construction of the separation wall, and settlement infrastructure development.

- Date: 2018
- Quote: "Volvo bulldozers and trucks have been photographed actively participating in house demolitions in East Jerusalem's Issawiya neighborhood and in Jordan Valley village evictions. The machines were identifiable as Volvo via logos on site."

--- NOTES ---

Volvo Group faced a successful divestment motion by the Church of Sweden and some U.S. churches around 2008-2010 for its role in the occupation (often grouped with Caterpillar in such efforts). The company has an official code of conduct but argues it cannot control end-use by governments. Volvo Cars (a separate Chinese-owned entity) is not implicated, only Volvo Group (trucks & equipment). Activists rank Volvo as more complicit than some because evidence of its machinery at demolition sites is plentiful. Volvo's Israeli distributor also services military vehicles. The severity is medium: significant involvement but not as notorious as Caterpillar since Volvo's share of direct military contracts is smaller.
